

CREATING SHARED GOVERNANCE

FULFILLING ACCOUNTABILITY: A TEMPLATE

PURPOSE

Collaboration efforts usually involve multiple, and often complex, layers of accountability. Collaboration partners need to clearly identify who they are accountable to, for what and how they will fulfil those accountabilities. Think about both internal and external audiences. For example, a collaboration is likely accountable to the individuals in the collaboration; their respective organizations; constituents impacted by the collaboration; and funders and other stakeholders that invest resources. Each of these audiences requires different kinds of accountability and degrees of attention.
